

ABSTRACT

It is an object to be able to record data with good signal quality over a wide range of linear velocities to an optical information recording medium. To achieve the stated object, in a laser drive circuit (5) of an optical information recording apparatus, the ratio of recording power to the power at which the reproduction signal quality reaches a threshold value is set to be relatively low at low velocities, and relatively high at high velocities.